The Result in the State.

The returns are not all in, but enough is known to give assurance that Robert S. Green, the Democratic candidate for Governor, has a plurality of 7 500. Hudson county gave him a majority of 8,400, and Essex, which is generally Republican, gave him a majority of 865. The vote throughout the State was nearly as heavy as in the Presidental election of 1884. The for Governor.

Tue Republicans gain one Congressman, John Kean of Union county, who, it will be remembered, was defeated by Robert S. Green, Governor elect, in 1884. The representation of the State In Congress will stand: Hires, Buchanan, Kean, Phelps, and Lehlbach, five Republicans, against Pidcock and McAdoo Democrats. The State Senate will contain twelve Republicans and nine Democrats, unless J. J. Gardener should prove to have been defeated when the full returns from Atlantic county are counted. This is the only doubtful Senate district.

According to the latest information the Assembly standing will be: Democrats, 31; Republicans, 28, and Labor 1, a net Democratic gain of 2. If this is not changed by new figures from two or three doubtful districts the Legislature will contain 41 Democrats, 39 Republicans, and 1 Labor Assemblyman endorsed by the Demovote on joint ballot. This would enable Gov. Abbett to go to the United States

Ties are claimed in the Assembly vote of the Second district of Passaic and the Second of Cumberland. It is not likely that the truth will be known about these districts until the official count is made. The giving of each of these districts to the Republicans will make a tie on joint ballot in the Legislature.

Completion of an Immense Well. From the East Orange Gazette

The Orange Water Company are just completing the work on their "Big Six" well, which is the largest of their three open wells, and of sufficient capacity alone to more than supply every demand upon the water system of the company. It is work out his ends. He must be "laying one hundred feet in diameter, in the clear, and is excavated to a depth of eighteen feet in solid sand stone. It is walled up from the rock in solid masonry to a height of about eight feet above the surface of the ground, and is covered by a conical roof rising to a height of one hundred feet above the water. The water is so clear that every seam and crevice in the bottom rock can be as plainly seen through the eighteen feet of water as through glass. Around the inner wall a narrow gallery is suspended about four feet above the surface of the water, and affords a promenade for visitors entirely around the well. This gallery and the shape of the well and roof afford the same properties as those of the famous "Whispering Gallery" in the dome of St. Paul's Cathedral, London, and a whisper is conveyed around the wall from one side of the well to the other as clearly as a shout can be heard across the | two half-grown young. Not feeling the

The roof of the well is built in three sections, separated by three-foot strips of heavy wire netting, affording perfect ventilation and light, and at the same time keeping leaves from getting into the well. The roof is entirely self-supporting, and is a triumph of mechanical ingenuity and skill. It was planned and built under the direction of Mr. John M. Rundall, Vice-President of the company, who has had charge of the construction of the well and of all the improvements on the property.

The water from the well is run by a syphon into well No. 4, about 100 yards nearer the pumping house, and from there is pumped through the mains. The entire supply for East Orange and Bloomfield is drawn from these wells without lowering the water in either to the level of the overflow pipes. Improvements are being constantly made to the property of the company and it is already a place of quite popular resoit. When the improvements now in progress are completed the grounds will be a very attractive pleasure park.

The company are now completing the laying of mains in Springdale avenue and Westcott street, the last work ordered by the town, and they have now an aggregate of forty miles of street mains laid in East

-The corner-stone of the Newark Female Charitable Society Building is to be laid to-day. The exercises are to be held in the Church of the Redeemer at 3 P. M. Drs, Buckley, Frazer, Few-Smith, Wilson and others will take part.

THE FUNNY MAN'S TASK.

The Beason Why Many Writers Become Worked Out-Brain and Stomach.

Not many moths ago a certain Boston newspaper was quoted from one end of the country to the other. Its humorous lyrics gave it a great reputation suddenly, and the paper, hitherto unheard of, went up like a rocket. At the present time, however, we seldom find the paper quoted; its verses are popular no longer—t e rocket has fallen a stick. The experience which the Boston paper has had does not differ from the experience which many other American papers have had during the last ten years. The craze for humorous writing has possessed many a newspaper which led a glorious career for a few weeks and then sank into obscurity. The trouble with the Boston humorous poet seems to have been that he worked himself out, and this, we will add, seems to have been the trouble with most of the newspaper humorists who have flourished and waned within the last decade.

There is no harder task in the world than that of attempting the same class of work for a protracted period, and in the literary profession the hardest kind of work one can be called upon to sustain is humor. We have frequently remarked that no man can sustain any * Prohibitionists claim 19,000 votes for Fisk | kind of literary work unless he meanwhile constantly improves and replenishes his mind; he must read, study, converse, see, travel-in short, he must be feeding his intellectuals all the time upon a variety of food, or his intellectuals will surely be exhausted before his ambition has been satisfied. The great mistakes of young writers are two. The first is in supposing that the mind is a self-feeding machine that is capable of producing indefinitely and requiring no special attention at the hands of the proprietors; the second is in supposing that the mind is capable of answering at once the demands of occasion, no matter how enormous those demands may be. The brain and the stomach are twins, and they demand similar treatment. The stomach demands regular refreshment and regular rest, and so does the brain. If the stomach doesn't get what it demands it makes serious trouble, but this trouble is a mere nothing compared with the worry, the vexation and the disappointment that an impoverished would be fair, we think, to estimate that about 90 per cent of the newspaper writers in this country neglect their brains; in this estimate we do not, of course, include the large number whose possession of brains is simply an allegation. The humorists, so-called, make a still sorrier showing. We will venture to say that 95 per cent. of their number have petered out merely because they have failed to recognize the great truth that the intellectual machine must be kept in running order or it will not A writer should never play out; he should do good work up to the years of senility, and senility should not come to him any earlier than it comes to the blacksmith, the merchant, or the farmer. But just as the blacksmith, the merchant and the farmer succeed in their vocations by exercising prudence and enterprise, so must the writer be willing to in" stock, or his supply will quickly be exhausted. He must study and and progress with the world, for the world is studying and progressing, and he who thinks not makes in that judgment a fatal mistake. - Chicago News.

PECULIARITIES OF THE PUMA.

An Animal Which Steadfastly Refuses to Recognize an Enemy in Man. I was told by a person who had spent most of his life on the pampas that on one occasion, when traveling in the neighborhood of Cape Corrientes, his horse died under him, and he was compelled to continue his journey on foot, burdened with his heavy native horsegear. At night he made his bed under the shelter of a rock, on the slope of a stony sierra; a bright moon was shining. and about 9 o'clock in the evening four pumas appeared, two adults with their least alarm at their presence he did not stir; and after awhile they began to gambol together close to him, concealing themselves from each other among the rocks, just as kittens do, and frequently while pursuing one another leaping over him. He continued watching them until past midnight; then fell asleep and did not wake until morning, when they had left him.

This man was an Englishman by birth, but having gone very young to South America, he had taken very kindly to the semi-barbarous life of the gauchos, and had imbibed all their peculiar notions, one of which is that human life is not worth very much. "What does it matter?" they often say, and shrug their shoulders, when told of a comrade's death. "So many beautiful horses die!" I asked him if he had ever killed a puma, and he replied that he had killed only one, and had sworn never to kill another. He said that while out one day with another gaucho looking for cattle a back against a stone, and did not move even when his companion threw the noose of his lasso over its neck. My informant then dismounted, and drawing his knife advanced to kill it; still the puma made no attempt to free itself from the lasso, but it seemed to know, he said, what was coming, for it began to tremble, the tears ran from its eyes, and it whined in the most pitiful manner. He killed it as it sat there unresisting before him, but after accomplishing the deed felt that he had committed a murder. It was the only thing he had ever done in his life, he added, which filled him with remorse when he remembered it. This I thought a rather startling declaration, as I knew that he had killed several individuals of his own species in duels, fought with knives, in the fashion of the gauchos. All who have killed or witnessed the killing of the puma-and I have questioned scores of hunters on this pointagree that it resigns itself in this unresisting, pathetic manner to death at the hands of man. Claudio Gay, in his "Natural History of Chili," says, "When attacked by man its energy and daring at once forsook it, and it becomes a weak, inoffensive animal, and trembling and uttering piteous moans, and shedding abundant tears, it seems to implore compassion from a generous enemy." The enemy is not often generous; but many gauchos have assured me, when speaking on this subject, that although they kill the puma readily to protect their domestic animals, they consider it an evil thing to take its life in desert places, where it is man's only friend among the wild animals.

sublime rage; its hair stands erect; its eyes shine like balls of green flame; t spits and snaris like a furious toment. The hunter's presence seems at such times to be ignored altogether, its whole attention being given to the dogs and its rage directed against them. In Patagonia a sheep-farming Scotchman, with whom I spent some days, showed me

When the hunter is accompanied by dogs, then the puma, instead of drooping and shedding tears, is aroused to the skulls of five pamas which he had shot in the vicinity of his ranch. One was of an exceptionally large individual, and I here relate what he told me of his encounter with this animal, as it shows just now the puma almost invariably behaves when attacked by man and dogs, He was out on foot with his flock, when the dogs discovered the animal concealed among the bushes. He had left his gun at home, and having no weapon, and finding that the dogs dared not attack it where it sat in a defiant attitude with its back against a thorny bush, he looked about and found a large dry stick, and going boldly up to it tried to stun it with a violent blow on the head. But though it never looked at him, its fiery eyes gazing steadily at the dogs all the time, he could not hit it, for with a quick side movement it avoided every blow. The small heed the puma paid him, and the apparent ease with which it avoided his best-aimed blows, only served to rouse his spirit, and at length striking with increased force his stick came to the ground and was broken to pieces. For some moments he now stood within two vards of the animal perfectly defenceless and not knowing what to do. Suddenly it sprang past him, actually brushing against his arm with its side. and began pursuing the dogs round and round among the bushes. In the end my informant's partner appeared on the scene with his rifle, and the puma was

In encounters of this kind the most curious thing is that the puma steadfastly refuses to recognize an enemy in man, although it finds him acting in concert with its hated canine foe, about whose hostile intentions it has no such delusion.-Longman's Magazine.

Discovery of a Northern River. Lieut. Stoney, who was sent out by the United States government to explore Putnam river, Alaska, which was discovered by him in 1883, has found a river to the north which the natives say emp ties into the Arctic near Point Barrow. The river is supposed to be the same as the one at the mouth of which Lieut. Ray established his headquarters during his observing expedition. Along the banks of this river were Indians who had never before seen a white man. Lieut. Stoney afterwards explored Natak river to its headwaters, and found it longer than the Putnam. He intended starting last January on a series of explorations

Swiss Patriotism and Prosperity. In Switzerland, out of 485,000 households 465,000 are householders. Here is one secret of the remarkable patriotism and prosperity of that people, and of their comparative exemption from labor troubles. Their excellent public schools and twenty-nine industrial schools, all topped up by their grand polytechnic institute at Zurich, including the same practical works as that of this Worcester industrial institute, have wonderfully unified the home-owning and home-loving people of those twenty-five east and north. - Frank Leslie's.

Though separate in race, religion and language, they are one in natural interest, proud of their history and prouder still of their recent progress and manufacturing prosperity. They are an ingenious and industrious people, and their mechanics are educated and skillful, believing in the dignity of labor and the thorough mastery of some trade. Though hemmed in by mountains, without a seaport, with few minerals and no coal, with costly transportation, all freight from the seaboard coming over foreign territory. Switzerland threatens the ribbon trade of Coventry, rivals the English and French in muslin and delaine, and the world in watches, music boxes and wood carving. - Age of

New Salvation Army Schemes.

The Salvation army have decided to add a new department to their opera tions in the metropolis. It is proposed to take two or three rooms in the poorer districts of London, which are to be occupied by a man and his wife or two women (members of the army), who will be provided with common medicine and lint for bandages, and a stock of pails, brushes, clothes, etc. Every morning these people wil visit the poor people living in the neighborhood, and where they find the rooms in a dirty condition they will clean them. Having thus gained an entry, they are to pay their attention to the spiritual welfare of the people. The medicines will be given, where necessary, without charge. They are also to visit the prison gates and endeavor to get discharged prisoners to seek she aid of the Salvation army .-London Standard.

Saved His Rations. In the fall of 1864 we were in west Tennessee on short rations. Our regiment had been fighting hard. One day Capt. G--- and myself sat eatingonly beans and coffee-when a shell lit close to our tent-door. We could see the blue smoke curling from its fuse. The captain at once clapped his hat over our coffee and beans, and went down under the table, while I went under our bunk. With a fearful report that shell burst, covering everything about us with sand. Jumping up, the captain took the hat off from over the beans, put it on his head, sat down, and finished his eating, remarking, "Rations are too scarce to lose any by foolishness."
